

KINO LORBER

presents

LA MAISON
DE LA RADIO

A film by Nicolas Philibert

2013 / 1.85:1 / 99 minutes / In French with English subtitles

A Kino Lorber Release
Kino Lorber, Inc.
333 West 39 St., Suite 503
New York, NY 10018

Publicity Contacts:
Rodrigo Brandão – rodrigo@kinolorber.com
Matt Barry – mbarry@kinolorber.com

KINO LORBER

FEATURING

In Order of Appearance

Angelique Bouin, Olivier Rieutord, Audrey Pulvar, Patrick Cohen, Marion Le Lay, Marc Fauvelle, Florenz Guyotat, Mickael Thebault, Oleksandr Zdebski, Bernard Guetta, Laurence Thomas, Francois Morel, Jean-Francois Achili, Bruno Duvic, Edgar Morin, Philippe Lefebure, Clotilde Dumetz, Thomas Legrand, Marie-Christine LeDu, Faouzi Tritah, Marguerite Gateau, Pierre Minne, Antoine Viossat, Sophie Bissants, Eric Caravaca, Tata Milouda, Jean-Michel Dayaz, Kevin LeBars, Cedric Chatelus, Bernard Cavanna, Eric Crambes, Bruno Maurice, Ruth Rosique, Edouard Fore Caul-Futy, Claire Lagard, Emmanuel Leclere, Marie-Claude Rabot-Pinson, Florence Paracuellos, Ali Djebbi, Andra Fereol, Jesus Cabrera, Olivier Dupuis, Jacques Monin, Renaud Dely, Therry Fiorile, Luc Lemonnier, Fabrice Abgrall, Christian Bauby, Claire Servajean, Jean-Philippe Dennnain, Laetitia Bernard, Corinne Audouis, Eric Delvaux, Yan Gallic, Manuel Ruffez, Geraldine Hallot, Bernard Cantin, Pierre-Louis Castelli, Xavier Gangepain, Akira Mizubayashi, Caroline Broue, Harve Gardette, Olivier Jeanjean, Etienne Mourez, Nicholas Stoufflet, Yann Pailleret, Adam "Fade" Simmons, Maik Schindler, Benjamin "Green T" Bambach, Romain Alary, Alexandre Herichon, Geoffrey de Schuyter, Frederic Lodeon, Philippe Vandel, Manuel Vallade, Cedric Aussir, Henri Alexandre, Antoine Baillet, Thomas Champeau, Romain Grard, Tristan Rosmorduc, Benoit Saladin, Sylvere Santlin, Maxime Taffanel, Francois Gan, Jacques Taroni, Leslie Coudray, Alain Passerel, Christine Simeone, Regis Lachaud, Cecile Beune, Emmanuel Curt, Francois Deforges, Jean-Baptise Leclere, Catherine Lenert, Gilles Rancitelli, Sylvain Legage, Michel Launay, Herre Pauchon, Jean-Pierre Badaire, Gilbert Huon, Jasmine Huon, Bernard Marpault, Claudine Montcult, Maryse Ruppe, Matthias Brauer and the Choir of Radio France, Rebecca Manzoni, Jean-Bernard Puoy, Anne Alvaro, Annie Ernaux, Marc Namblard, Bernard Lagnel, Pierric Charles, Antonio Placer, Jean-Marie Machado, Benedict Heim, Alain Veinstein, Umberto Eco, Francois Busnel, Laurent Lantieri, Mathieu Vidard, Jean-Claude Carriere, Arno, Space Invader, Jos Houben, Philippe Callin, Xavier Mauduit, Maie Vidal, Celine Bonhomme, Olivier Dallgault, Jermome Chellus, Alain Bedouet, Caroline Ostermann, Lauranne Thomas, Aude-Emilie Judique, Alain Amstam, Alexandre Besikian, Jean-Philippe Jeanne, Jean Claude Ameisen, Laurent Marlotte, Jean-Michel Montu, Djubaka, Jerome Cadet, Sebastien Hazard, Soiziz Guillat, Zoe Perrac, Nasser Madji, Vanessa Descouraux, Sophie Becherel, Evelyne Adam, Elisabeth Rodler, Frederic Poirier, Emmanel Dupuy, Pierre Bastien, Thomas Baumgartner, Veronik Lamendour, Ines de Bruyn, Emmanuelle Maurs D'Incamps, Claude Courteaud, Gabriel Pereira, Marie Richeux, Helene Fily, Letitia Gayet

And the Voices of

Joel Collado, Franck Mathevon, Pascale Clark, Billie Foutrier, Norbert Vallee, Michael Ladd, Claude Guibal, Sihem Bensedrine, Sophie Bessis

KINO LORBER

CREW

Director
Nicolas Philibert

Executive Producer
Serge Lalou

Line Producer
Virginie Gubbaud

Lighting
Katell Djian

Camera
Nicolas Philibert, Katell Djian
Laurent Chevallier

Sound Recording
Julien Cloquet
Xavier Gritte, Laurent Malan, Nicolas Philibert, Olivier Schwob

Editor
Nicolas Philibert

Assistant Editors
Lea Masson, Janusz Baranek, Madelyne Coleno, Fanny Weinzaepflen

Mixer
Olivier Do Huu

Calibration
Magali Leonard

Assistant Directors
Amaury Chardeau, Pailine Coudurier

Director of Production Development
Katya Laraison

Additional Assistant Directors
Zaki Allal, Aurelie Bardet, Magali Boccaccio, Yoann Bouchard, Nicholas Duchene, Magali Fouquet, Florence Gilles, Etienne Grandeau, Juliette Hourcourigaray, Claire Lacombe, Damien Lagogue, Jean-Baptiste La Guen, Angele Le Neve, Anais Meuzeret, Marina Mis, Cecile Philibert, Sophie Vermersch

KINO LORBER

SYNOPSIS

A journey into the heart of Radio France to discover what usually escapes our gaze: the mysteries and the wings of a media whose very matter, sound, remains invisible.

DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

One reason why so many people, myself included, love radio - but I didn't realize this until long after I started to love it - has to do with the lack of images, the invisible nature of those who talk on it, just as the innumerable places it takes us to remain invisible. An invisibility that allows us to imaginarily identify with those who speak and which, without our having to leave home, allows us to travel on land, sea, in every strata of society, in every sphere of thought and human activity. But the radio is also our collective memory. Voices that we are familiar with, jingles, songs we know by heart, totally carefree moments, "slots" that shape our daily lives and ritualize them. And sometimes, it's just a backdrop that we do not listen to, a friendly, reassuring presence while we are doing something else.

– Nicolas Philibert, June 2010

NICOLAS PHILIBERT FILMOGRAPHY

LA MAISON DE LA RADIO (2012, 103 mn)
NIGHT FALLS ON THE MENAGERIE (2010, 11 mn)
NENETTE (2010, 70 mn)
BACK TO NORMANDY (2007, 113 mn)
THE INVISIBLE (2002, 45 mn)
TO BE AND TO HAVE (2002, 104 mn)
WHO KNOWS ? (1999, 106 mn)
EVERY LITTLE THING (1997, 105 mn)
ANIMALS (1995, 60 mn)
IN THE LAND OF THE DEAF (1993, 99 mn)
LOUVRE CITY (1990, 84 mn)
BAQUET'S COME-BACK (1988, 24 mn)
GO FOR IT, LAPEBIE ! (1988, 27 mn)
TRILOGY FOR ONE MAN (1987, 53 mn)
CHRISTOPHE (1985, 28 mn)
THE NORTH FACE OF THE CAMEMBERT (1985, 7 mn)
BOSSES / TELEVISION (1979, 3 X 60 mn, co-re. avec Gerard Mordillat)
HIS MASTER'S VOICE (1978, 100 mn, co-re. avec Gerard Mordillat)

KINO LORBER

INTERVIEW WITH NICOLAS PHILIBERT

How did you get the idea for this film?

It was something that I had had in mind for a long while. The idea of filming voices. A film about radio is a little unnatural - how can you film radio without shattering its mystery? - but that is probably the reason why I wanted to make it.

At the start of shooting, did you know exactly what you wanted to film?

No, absolutely not. I don't make my films with a pre-existing desire to get a message across. When shooting begins, I usually think that the less I know, the better I feel! If I had to follow a schedule I'd be bored stiff and might miss out on the essential. The initial idea was to plunge the audience into the heart of this hive of activity known as Radio France, where the variety of stations offers an incredible range of programming, styles, tones, voices, accents and faces, without having to worry about balancing the stations or being trapped in a logic of "equal representation". It would thus be a free journey, free of all institutional concerns. But once this basic principle had been established, everything still had to be done! When I started shooting, I had certain programmes and voices in mind, but that's about it. I had no idea how the film would be constructed. That's always the case. The journey unfolds through encounters, circumstances and occasional accidents. I need a starting point, a framework, a few rules and from then on I improvise.

How long did you stay on site and how many of you were there?

Most of the time there were four of us but I occasionally worked alone or with one other person. Filming took place over six months from January to July 2011, then I started to cut the footage and, during editing, I went back from time to time to shoot additional sequences since editing can reshuffle the cards and bring out new paths to follow.

Radio France produces and broadcasts a huge amount of programming each week. According to what criteria did you choose to film one programme rather than another?

Every one of us has "their own" radio, their favourite shows, their pet hosts, their daily or weekly appointments with the airwaves. That also holds true for me but it isn't what determined the film's backbone. I wanted diversity and heterogeneity, as I said, but it couldn't become excessively varied or turn into a filmed catalogue without a guiding line.

So how did I proceed? It's hard to say because I had to take numerous factors into account: the very nature of the programmes, their dramaturgy, their content on a specific day... And I soon realized that a quality programme did not necessarily provide a good sequence! And that the interest in filming such and such a programme was not proportional to the importance of its content or subject.

Worse! The content as such could prove to be a trap: the "stronger" it was, the more likely it was to undermine the film, insofar as it might overshadow what interested me in the first place, namely the grammar and mechanics of radio.

(CONT'D)

KINO LORBER

(CONT'D)

So I preferred seemingly more trivial but cinematic criteria: faces, looks, intonations, the fluidity or pitfalls of a word, the tone and the sensuality of a voice, the body that carries it, the accent of a guest, the gestures of a programme host, the atmosphere of a studio... In short, I often relied more on the "presence" of different people than on what they were saying. Finally, I had to try to keep a view of the whole and not film the programmes for themselves, but rather approach them as the raw material from which, in turn, I would build up a story. This is where the part of fiction inherent in writing any documentary comes into play.

Apart from the pre-title sequence, the news programming is not really developed...

And yet I was shooting in a particularly turbulent period, rich in events of a "global" scope: the Arab revolutions, the Fukushima disaster... These events are mentioned in the film but I did not want to give them too much space. They weren't the subject. Moreover, news is perishable. In order not to "date" the film and so retain a timeless dimension, we had to avoid sticking too closely to the facts.

What difficulties did you encounter during filming?

This is a film that required a great deal of flexibility and responsiveness from everyone. Given the huge amount of programming produced and broadcast each day on the different stations of Radio France, we had to be constantly on the alert. In some cases, I was able to get the theme of a programme and the names of the guests in advance, then I could anticipate and organize things ahead of shooting. But I often had to mobilize the crew at the very last minute each time the news made me want to shoot a morning programme. The crew was warned at eight or nine o'clock in the evening and summoned the next morning at five.

Alongside these logistical problems, the main challenges that I faced were related to my own appetite and desire to film, which I needed to contain. In my previous films, I've noticed more than once that it is more difficult not to shoot than to shoot. Especially these days, with digital cameras. There, in the midst of that hive of activity, that seemed trued than ever!

And so I was torn between the desire to shoot more and more in order to feed the diversity essential to the project while knowing that it was a bottomless pit. Hence the need to resist it and to continually refer back to the notion of writing. One final difficulty: how to avoid impeding the work of others and disturbing the sometimes delicate balance of a recording? Take Eclectik, Rebecca Manzoni's programme: I repeatedly filmed the end of it at that unusual moment when Rebecca, after an hour of conversation, goes out and leaves her guest alone in front of the microphone, asking him or her to improvise. Our presence could not distort or make this "minute of solitude" impossible, so we managed to film it without being physically present. That was the lesser evil. A little strange too.

There are a lot of characters and situations yet we move from one world to another with a great deal of fluidity. How did you approach editing?

In terms of construction, I opted for the simplest solution: the film unfolds over one day and one night. But it is a fairly virtual day that combines sequences shot in winter, in spring, or in summer with the Tour de France. In the middle of the day, there's even a brief sequence at night when the writer Annie Ernaux talks of her anger alone in her living room.

(CONT'D)

KINO LORBER

(CONT'D)

This framework of a day helped me to build up the film, forming a sort of scaffolding, but there was no question of following it to the letter. After a while, I think it no longer bothers us. However, since the film has a very fragmented aspect, it was important to have recurring "characters" like Marguerite Gateau directing a radio play or Marie-Claude Rabot-Pinson in the France Inter newsroom. I think we enjoy coming back to them, seeing the shifts in situations and monitoring the progress of work over a single day. For me, editing is like a musical score: one note summons another, which summons a third, and so on. There are full and empty moments, long and short ones, silences, associations of ideas, breaks in the rhythm... I have also played a great deal on what lies outside the frame: films must keep their secrets and if we want to feed the audience's imagination we must leave some shady areas.

Did the nature of this project lead you to work on the soundtrack in a specific way?

You could say that sound, voices and listening are the very subject matter of the film. However, the soundtrack is fairly simple, almost uncluttered and certainly without flourishes. I devoted a great deal of attention to it, especially during editing: the links, associations and passages from one sequence to another are often based on the sounds and owe a great deal to them. But that is not unique to this film. In my own way, I'm a filmmaker of language. From His Master's Voice, which exposed leading bosses' views, to Nénette, whose soundtrack is entirely off screen, via In the Land of the Deaf, Every Little Thing, To Be and to Have or even Back to Normandy, you can see most of my films as variations on speech and language. It is therefore not surprising that the question of sound occupies a decisive position since it embraces the subject here.

Paris, January 2013